

Installation and Commissioning

Wasco Engineering has been servicing the oil and gas industry for the last 25 years and has vast experience in the field. Installation and commissioning of equipment are one of the most critical aspects of project delivery. If carried out incorrectly, it can lead to major equipment failure and production losses which has huge cost implications. Wasco's team of highly skilled engineers in conjunction with experienced commissioning specialists provides installation and commissioning services of the highest quality. Wasco designs its equipment to help in easy installation and quick startup to ensure the project commences without the lengthy delays normally associated with commissioning.

Wasco can also provide commissioning services for third-party equipment. Customers who face delays in commissioning or require third party advice due to protracted unresolved issues are provided the services of our engineers who will travel to the site and assist in resolving all technical issues. They are assisted by an experienced team of commissioning specialists trained on an extensive array of OEM equipment.
